

A recent update to Google Now made it so the it listened for the hotword on your home screen without you having to launch it or do anything else. Naturally, everyone went 'yay' and it was business as usual. The update, although not that amazing made it a little easier to use Google Now but it still doesn't have anything on Siri which, although not voice activated, can be launched from any screen. It turns out you can get Google Now to listen for the OK Google hotword on any screen, even if you're playing a game, or using Facebook. There's a trick to unlocking it that involves nothing more than a quick voice search and a little tinkering in Google Now's settings.

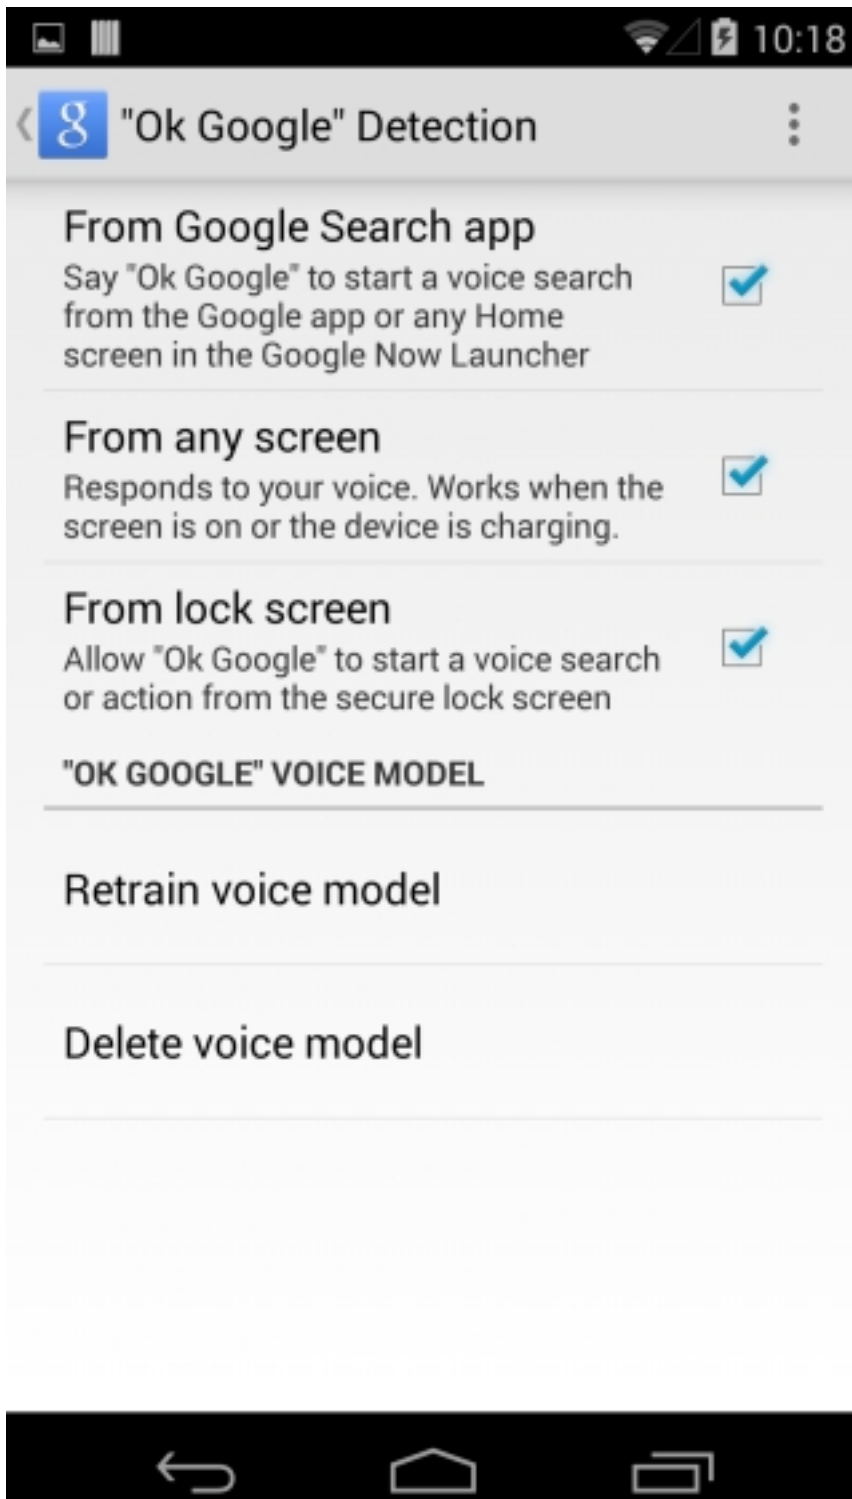

In Google Now, search for Okay Google Everywhere. You will first need to say 'Okay Google' in order to tell the app that you are about to issue a command and then say 'Okay Google, Everywhere'. Disregard the search results and go to Google Now's settings.

Top 50 Android Apps | Google Play | Google | Detection | News | Facebook | Android | iPhone | iPad | RSS | About | Contact | Privacy Policy | Terms of Service | Sitemap

[Read And Add Ok Google Detection To All Screens On Your Device \[No Root\]](#) by Fatma W. Arab