

Thanks to the App Store's massive size, there are more sports app for iOS than the number of points Roger Federer has won in his entire career. While apps like LiveScore and Mobile ESPN are more than enough to cater to your everyday needs, they don't really offer anything that you couldn't have had on your computer. The new 365Scores, on the other hand, goes that extra mile and adds a pretty unique dimension to the genre of sports-related apps. 365Scores does not force users to read whatever the app deems important. Instead, you get to decide everything about the news feeds and displayed fixtures. There are already some apps out there that let users specify one favorite team. 365Scores is different, as it lets you add as many teams, leagues and sports to your favorites, and displays nothing but updates related to items of your interest. Plus, you can get live scores at a lot of places, but this app is among the precious few that actually offer free video updates while a game is in progress.
