

Last week's CES 2016 was a melting pot of the latest tech creations by companies from all over the world. We covered the mobile announcements from the spot extensively, but we figured you may also like to see on video on what it looks like to visit the venue. Check out our video below where we mention the mobile highlights of CES, trending technologies, and the new products you may have missed from our CES coverage page. For me personally, it was the first big industry event that I've attended and I was ecstatic to take part in this weeklong mishmash of meeting people, seeing new tech, convention center food, and lugging equipment around the show floor for hours on end. Check out my personal account of the experience, in case you've missed it. As far as mobile announcements are concerned, I think it was obvious that CES 2016 underdelivered. It's clear we're all looking forward to the upcoming MWC in Barcelona next...
